

Social Centre Shifts to the Fashionable Health Resorts

Autumn Season at Popular American Cures More Brilliant Than Ever Before—All Indications Now Point to a Gay Winter in Town Despite War's Shadow

SOCIETY has often been likened to a kaleidoscope and the smile is apt. The constant turning of the machine presents a different aspect of the same brightly colored particles week after week. In truth, there is nothing more interesting than to watch the way in which the different patterns take shape.

There has been a turn of the machine within the last ten days and all the little bright particles that have been grouped so close in and about New York have now been sent in many different directions. The "cure season" is now on, and the well people as well as the fashionable invalids are thoroughly enjoying life at the different health resorts.

The autumn season at America's health resorts naturally is far more brilliant this year than ever on account of the war. Even those individuals who had thought it possible to get along without the "cure" have now decided that it is absolutely essential to their well being and incidentally their social position before the real winter season opens to have their names listed at the Hot Springs, the White Sulphur, French Lick or any one of the many places where the people grow stout and stout people grow thin.

The weather has been ideal at the Hot Springs and the White Sulphur. There has been a lot of golf for those who play golf, delightful afternoon teas at the Golf Club and incidentally at the hotels. The afternoon tea hour is rightfully pronounced almost the most delightful of the twenty-four. There has been dancing for those who must dance, horseback riding for those who must ride, motoring for those who are fond of motoring, the most delightful diet for those who must diet, the most delicious food for those happy persons who are to grow stout, and every kind and description of bath for those who require a water cure. And a daily regimen carried out on strict lines, which it must be confessed has been modeled in many instances to suit the American temperament, gives every one a delightful sense of being under discipline and at the same time getting the full of enjoyment in the best of society.

It is said that real, true social friendship can be made at a cure better than anywhere else. Another thing that is put forward in its favor is that only the really rich can enjoy it. That is to say the larger your income the more luxurious can your accommodations, and this without any vulgar or ostentatious display of wealth, such as is considered bad form.

It is to be a gay winter? Every day brings new indication that there is to be an unprecedented amount of entertaining. The war shadow over Europe of necessity affects America, but there is almost a hysterical rest in the prosperity of America which forbids grieving too deeply over the sorrows of those who live on the other side of the water. The fact that all charitable war work is immensely fashionable proves that there is no selfishness in the gaiety of the life that is planned for New York city.

On the contrary, the very fact of all this prosperity makes it easier to help those who are fighting. The hostesses who are laying their plans for entertaining well and wisely are many in number, and if all goes well this surely will be a gay season.

There are no entertainments planned on a lavish scale and any number of smaller affairs to which the invitations are to be limited in number, and consequently are being eagerly sought for. The fashionable debutante is to have not only her formal afternoon reception but a dinner for her young people only, at which the planning in the world society's dining list has grown to such enormous size as to make the giving of any entertainment to which old and young are taken almost an impossibility. It is quite the thing to talk about the charming, refined society that exists at other places and other countries where old and young are invited to the same entertainments. The modern hostess knows full well that if she invites the parents and chaperones of her daughter's acquaintance the young people will have very little chance for amusement. The up to date parents of the up to date debutante are so identified with social life and so accustomed to going to dinners and dances that they do not delegate to the background with good grace. It is an age of independence, independence for fathers and mothers as well as for their children.

Classes of all kinds are to be fashionable this winter, and it is to be the thing to study a great deal. Lectures of all kinds, and on all topics, are to be well attended, for to be successful really one must be cleverly cultured. Current event classes, where the news of the day is administered to a carefully selected audience, in carefully selected doses, easily assimilated, are almost as profitable for the lecturer as are still the auction bridge lessons for the bridge instructors.

There are those who say that the social life of the New York society must be thoroughly conversant with every line of auction and should be thoroughly conversant with the news of the day, but learning acquired in this way can possibly be realized by any outsider. Therefore women of all ages are delightedly occupied in planning out their day with various lectures and lessons as well as the more social engagements that will be held when the season opens.

There is no date for this "social opening of the season." The first social night is, of course, the great "social" and December ushers in the "social" season, which means that the social season is open for the winter. In the meantime there have been the Tuxedo ball and many, very many dances at country clubs and at fashionable houses near town. The Junior Cotton, which has its first meeting on November 1, is a social event for debutantes, but more formal entertainments come later. It would be a difficult matter indeed to say just when is the psychological moment—when every one is in town and the gaiety of the winter starts in with full force, not to stop until the Southern exodus begins.

In the meantime there are not so many, not nearly so many, fashionable people in town this week as there were last. As has been said, they are taking the "cure" or they are all off visiting for the week end of entertaining house parties themselves. The winter troupeaux have all been planned and are well under way, and the details of entertaining have all been thoroughly worked out, and this is the delightful "between season." Society is resting.

The coming week will have much interest for debutantes, particularly on account of the annual autumn dance on Friday night at the Tuxedo Club. The dance is being given a week earlier than for some years, and Tuxedo will be filled with parties of the young people for the occasion. The dance is on the part of debutantes at this ball is never considered a formal introduction to society, as the Tuxedo dances, while somewhat informal, are more or less like family affairs, and to be asked to a club dance is quite the same as being invited to a private party.

The new club to be reviewed are the Clinton Graduates Club, Miss Laura Harvey, president; Berkeley Institute Alumnae Association, Miss Anita L. Leff, president; Daughters of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, Mrs. Herbert Bouton, president; Phoebe Club, Mrs. James McLaughlin, president; New York Women's League for Animals, Mrs. Philip Shoun, president; the Mothers' Club of Lynbrook, Long Island, Mrs. J. "How this Committee can serve the Biennial Convention in 1916" was the subject for discussion. This committee includes in its membership the chairman of literature of each affiliated club and the president of each club is an invited guest at each conference.

of the Waldorf-Astoria was filled to capacity with members and guests, who enjoyed the splendid programme as arranged by the chairman of the day, Mrs. George M. Robinson, Miss Florence Weir Gibson, president, was in the chair. The subject was "Philosophy of Poetry" and the poem for study, Bishop Heber's "Apology." The principal address of the session was given by the Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright, D. D.

Mrs. Horace Stokes, elected historian in place of Mrs. Charles E. Terhune, resigned. The delegates elected to the New York State conference, D. A. R., to be held at Hotel Astor in November, were the regent and Mrs. Victor Frederickson, with Mrs. William R. Stewart and Mrs. L. Sparks Kirsch alternates.

The State Democratic Forum, Mrs. Robins A. Lutz, president, will have the first afternoon meeting of the season at the Hotel Astor on Thursday. Reports will be made by the standing committees, reporting the work done during the summer months. The candidates to be elected and the best way for the women to help their various districts will be taken up in part by the president.

For the benefit of the St. Lawrence Hospital a bridge and tea will be given on November 12 at the Plaza under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary.
